Mission Statement

As stewards of all that God has given us, the Parish Family of Our Lady of Lourdes serves and ministers to all who come to this place. Regardless of a person's history, ethnicity, gender, orientation, age or race, we commit ourselves to open wide the doors of our Parish to provide a place of welcome and hospitality.

Vision...

so that all may know that they are a vital part of the Body of Christ, we further recommit and challenge ourselves to...

Live out our Baptismal call passionately by caring for all of God's people with justice.

Grow in an understanding of God's role in each of our lives.

Respond to the Gospel in a radical way, inviting and inspiring all to form the Kingdom of God in every moment of life.

Acknowledge we are not complete without the willingness to grow, discern and discover the Spirit who moves and guides us.

El Salvador Mission

"Sponsorship Weekend"

The participants of Our Lady of Lourdes Mission Trip would like to extend an invitation to all parishioners. The weekend of August 18/19 will be "Sponsorship Weekend". After all the Masses, members the Mission Trip group will be in the APR providing all parishioners with the opportunity to sponsor a child or elderly person in El Salvador. This has been a wonderful experience which we would like to share with our parish family. Please join us in helping the poor of El Salvador, and make a difference in someone's life.

Along with that, we will be again selling our Casa Project piggy banks to collect loose change. This "change" has become the major funding for building homes in El Salvador. As always we thank you for your continued support and generosity to our El Salvador Mission .

Dear Parishioners:

Greetings from the rectory! I hope and trust that all goes well by you and that you are enjoying the summer-or at least weathering the heat and humidity and torrential rain at times!

As you know, Fr. Mike began a Capital Campaign to renovate/refurbish various areas and buildings in the Parish. One of the aspects of the campaign focused on the Church itself. On Monday, we began installing new pews in the Church with a slightly different pew configuration as well. There will also be new carpeting in the Church and sanctuary area. While we are celebrating mass in the All-Purpose Room this weekend, the hope is that we will be back “in church” next weekend (August 4/5). If not, we will still be in the All-Purpose Room for another week at most. Stay tuned...

As part of the work needed, Sr. Nancy and Deacon Jack arranged for a small army of volunteers to “clean-out” the Church. As the saying goes: “many hands make light work” and we were able to accomplish our task in little over an hour.

Last week, we hosted our annual Vacation Bible Camp; over 200 children participated in the camp with just as many young volunteers. While taking the risk of not mentioning everyone who helped out, I would like to highlight some of the leadership people. A special thank you goes to the following for making the Vacation Bible Camp successful: Trish Frodell (Director), Mary Cameron, Ann Quinlan, Lori Mallimo and Mary Polley. I realize that it took a tremendous effort on the part of many people but I wanted to highlight some of the leadership people.

As you may recall, the first weekend of the month, I am usually away for my Air National Guard weekend. Normally, you will not see me during the weekend but I will be back for the Sunday evening Mass at 6:00pm. So, I will not be here in the parish this weekend; however, Fr. Bob returns to the parish after a well-deserved break so it will be nice to have him back this weekend.

Remember what Mother Theresa often said: “Together we can do something for God”.

In Christ,

Msgr. Brian

18th Sunday in Ordinary Time

In the last few years there has been much concern over the job market. While some states are still dealing with significant unemployment percentages, others, such as North Dakota with its booming energy industry, are at nearly a record low. Commentators have been saying for months that the unemployment statistics will weigh heavily in this fall's presidential election. Since Pope Leo XIII issued the encyclical Rerum Novarum in 1891, the church has emphasized the dignity of labor as one of the keystones of a just society and a well-ordered economy. Unbridled capitalism has never been an accepted goal in a theology that always seeks to uphold the common good.

In the Gospel for today, Jesus is asked by the crowd, "What can we do to accomplish the works of God?" after he tells them not to work for food that will perish. His response is that the work of God is to believe in the One God sent.

The workplace of today is vastly different from that of the past. Many businesses and employers have restrictions on what an employee can even have at his or her workstation. But there may be times when it is possible to bear witness to the faith even in the most restrictive of environments. Something as simple as wearing a discreet religious emblem, or sharing a story from church on Sunday, can gently open up a conversation about belief. That can lead to an opportunity to share more or even the chance to invite someone to come to church with you. A simple response like, "I'm blessed today," to the question of, "How are you?" can help frame one's understanding of life in reference to God. It is then easier share that approach to life in a non-threatening way with others. We don't necessarily need big signs in daily life to promote our faith in Christ. But it is our work to do so in any way that we can.

A Prophetic Mantra about the Poor

by Ron Rolheiser, OMI

Nobody gets to heaven without a letter of reference from the poor! That's a quote attributed to James Forbes, an interdenominational pastor in New York City, and it wonderfully captures something that the ancient prophets of Israel underlined many centuries ago.

The great prophets of Israel had coined this mantra: The quality of your faith will be judged by the quality of justice in the land. And the quality of justice in the land will always be judged by how "widows, orphans, and strangers" are faring while you are alive. That phrase, "widows, orphans, and strangers", was code for the three weakest, most-vulnerable, groups in society at the time. For the great prophets of Israel, ultimately we will be judged religiously and morally on the basis of how the poorest of the poor fared while we were alive.

That's a scary thought which becomes scarier when we see how Jesus strongly endorsed that view. While this needs to be contextualized within Jesus' message as a whole, we have in Matthew's Gospel the famous text about the Last Judgment where Jesus tells us that, at the end of day, when we stand before the great King on the day of judgment, we will be asked only one set of questions and they all will have to do with how we treated the poor: Did you feed the hungry? Give drink to the thirsty? Welcome the stranger? Clothe the naked? Visit the sick? Visit prisoners? I doubt that any of us would have the raw courage to preach this, just as it is written in the gospels, from any pulpit today. And yet Jesus meant it. Nobody gets to heaven without a letter of reference from the poor.

Now there's a whole series of challenges in this.

First: The demand to live lives that reflect justice and real concern for the poor is an integral and non-negotiable part of Christian discipleship. It's not something that is grounded in some particular ideology which I can buy into or neglect, as long as I am living honestly and prayerfully in my private life. It's an essential part of the gospel, equal in demand to praying, going to church, and keeping my private moral-life in order. For a Christian, it is not enough just to be pious, good, and church-going. We need too a concrete letter of reference from the poor.

Next: What that mantra of the prophets and Jesus' teaching on the Last Judgment also teaches is that charity alone is not enough. Charity is a great virtue, integrally part of the greatest virtue of all, love. It may never be downplayed. But charity isn't necessarily justice. I can be a wonderfully charitable, kind, moral, and generous person in my own life and still be unfairly profiting from an historical, social, political, and economic system that is unduly rewarding me even as it is unfairly burdening and robbing others. The things that I attain honestly through my own hard work and which I am very generous with in terms of sharing with others, can at the same time be the product of a system which is unfair to others. Taking care of "widows, orphans, and strangers" requires not just personal goodness and charity, but requires too that I have the courage to look at how my honest wealth may also be partially the product of a dishonest system. Who loses while I gain?

Finally: The mantra of the prophets and the teachings of Jesus about the Last Judgment should be a challenge to perennially scrutinize myself with the question: Am I actually reaching out to the poor? Do I have real "orphans, widows, and strangers" in my life? Is my commitment to the poor something only in theory, an ideal that I uphold but something that never actually impacts the poor? It is easy to pay lip-service to this ideal and it is even easier to write it into my curriculum vitae so that I look good to others and feel good about myself. However, as Ruth Burrows asks: Does our rhetoric about the poor actually help them or does it just help us feel better about ourselves?

I concede that these are not easy questions and we should be slow to answer them. Sometimes all we can do is admit our helplessness. I was once at a talk given by Gustavo Gutierrez where, after the presentation, a man stood up and, with pained honesty, shared about his own helplessness in reaching out to the poor: What can one person do in the face of all the global issues of injustice that beset us?

Gutierrez acknowledged the complexity of the question and sympathized with the man's helplessness, but then added: "Minimally, make sure that you always have at least one concrete poor person in your life to who you are specially attending. This will ensure that your commitment will always at least have some concrete flesh!"

A single letter of reference from the poor is better than no letter at all.

Sharing the Gospel

Just one day earlier, Jesus multiplied five loaves of bread and two fish to feed over five thousand people. In today's Gospel, some of those people came looking for Jesus, hoping to get another free lunch. They didn't understand that Jesus wants all people to believe in him. Through faith in Jesus, you can live forever. In heaven you will never be hungry or thirsty again.

Mission for the Week

If you believe in Jesus, you can look forward to heaven one day. Read Revelation 21:3-7 with your family. Heaven will be wonderful!
