Our Lady of Lourdes Mission Awareness Trip 2007

Raising awareness and consciousness on a situation of poverty and commitment.

What is our sister parish commitment?

After our first Mission Awareness Retreat five summers ago, the young people who participated returned from the trip with an idea: why don't we at OLL "adopt" Esquipulas, one of the small communities we had visited? These young visionaries put together a proposal and presented it to our pastoral team and pastoral council, who enthusiastically supported it. We made a three-year commitment to a relationship with Esquipulas, a relationship that involves both fund-raising and consciousness-raising. The young people from that original group have continued to be part of our Sister Parish Team, along with other OLL parishioners who want to help make a difference! Now, three years later, we are happy to have raised almost $10,000 for Esquipulas, allowing them to construct a hanging bridge over the river which they must cross each day to get to work, school, and farm areas.

As we come to the end of our commitment to Esquipulas, our young missionaries have again identified a community in need of our help. Tacuba is a community in the west of El Salvador, an area that has been particularly devastated by earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. The church in Tecuba, St. Mary Magdalene, is the heart of the community, and people literally walk hours down from the mountains each Sunday to have mass with their pastor, Fr. Servio Tulio. The school there educates almost 300 children (almost exactly the same size as OLL!) and there are many needs in the community.

At least ten families in the community are in need of simple homes of sheet metal and mud brick. We would like to make Tacuba our Sister Parish for the next three years.

Visit our website, www.ollchurch.org/elsalvador, to follow the progress of our mission group
as they share their experiences of visiting our sister parish.

Spiritual Direction

...for those who want the companionship of a director to journey with them in finding God's desire for them in their daily life.

Follow these articles each week, for the next several weeks, as we explore and explain "Spiritual Direction."

What is Spiritual Direction?

Spiritual Direction is a specialized ministry in the church. It is a graced way of serving another believer, helping the other to grow in intimacy with God and to live out the consequences of this intimacy.

The focus of a spiritual direction relationship is the directee's experience of God and how communication happens between God and the directee. Trained spiritual directors have a background in ministry, communication skills, personality dynamics and various resources in prayer, spirituality and scripture. Both director and directee agree to meet regularly so that the directee might pay closer attention to God.

If you have any questions, or you would like to make arrangements to meet with a Spiritual Director, please call Deacon John DeGuardi at the Parish Office at 661.3224. (It is recommended that you make a three month commitment of one meeting per month.)

Financial Summary

Weekly Collection	$

+/- for the week	$ ()

Due to a change in the bulletin deadline this week, the collection amount for the week of July 1 will appear in a future bulletin.

The estimated weekly collection needed to maintain and operate our parish buildings, ministries, programs and salaries is $21,000.

There will be no summer vacation this year!

Well that got your attention, didn't it. But don't worry - we are not suggesting that you cancel your plans - summer vacation is far too important. It is a time for rest, relaxation, and renewal.

But we are reminding you that our parish never takes a break. We are here day by day ministering to the needy, celebrating sacraments, reaching out to our parishioners in so many ways. Our need for your support is just as important, maybe even more important, during these summer days.

So don't forget us when you are away on vacation. Please continue to provide your generous support to our community. Many parishioners find that using the mailing envelope that we send with your weekly envelopes to be a wonderful and thoughtful way of continuing their support during these summer months.

Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Much has been made in the media in recent years regarding what some perceive as the growing effort to remove Christianity from the public's eye. From nativity scenes on government property at Christmas to simple crosses, some people just do not want to see them. But is this really new? Can we really say that images and activities representing a Christian life have always been accepted in public until now?

Today's Gospel reading from Luke puts into perspective Jesus' attitude toward those who choose not to believe in him. He tells his 72 disciples that they are to fan out across the countryside, but he does warn them that they will indeed face opposition and scorn in their evangelization efforts. The best they can do, he tells them, is to keep on trying, to move on and continue to proclaim the good news of saving grace.

The Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches us that going out to proclaim Christ's good news on his behalf is an apostolic duty or mission of the Church. When explaining the presence and goodness of God in the lives of non-believers, we are to have a respectful dialogue with them. (CCC 856) Just as we are to understand free will and the consequences of our decisions, so too must we understand that not everyone will choose to share our beliefs. Still, we must never give up trying!

Helping Create a Symphony of Prayer

Fr. Ron Rolheiser, OMI

Theologians make an important distinction between what they call "devotional" and "liturgical" prayer. "Devotional" prayer, they tell us, is private in nature and is meant to help sustain us personally on the spiritual journey. "Liturgical" prayer, by contrast, is public by nature, the church's prayer (not our own), is universal in scope, and is intended for the needs of the world.

We don't always grasp this, to the detriment of both kinds of prayer. Perhaps we might understand this better if we put different names to these. What helps clarify things for me are the terms "affective" and "priestly" prayer. "Affective" prayer refers to private prayer, prayer that's about us, focused precisely on bringing us and our feelings to God. "Priestly" prayer, on the other hand, is not about us, is about the world, is public in nature, and it doesn't have to be meaningful personally to be of value. But how can this be? How can prayer be of value if it isn't personally meaningful?

An analogy might be helpful: Imagine you're part of a symphony orchestra, playing an instrument that contributes to an overall musical score. Night in and night out, you're playing the same piece in the same theatre, helping to create a beautiful symphony for the audience.

The public prayer of the church, priestly prayer, works exactly like that. It's a symphony intended for the benefit of everyone and open to everyone.

This has a number of ramifications: First of all, it clarifies some age-old questions about who benefits from our prayer and who doesn't. Are people who have others to pray for them more lucky than those who don't? Imagine two people, both in pain and in need of prayer: The first is a very well-loved individual, part of a big and loving community, perhaps even a public figure, and he has many people praying for him. The second person isn't as lucky. She's alone, without family and friends, unknown to the world, with nobody to pray for her. Are we to believe that the first person has drawn a lucky straw and will benefit from all the prayers offered for him, while the second will languish alone, without the benefit of prayer since she has nobody to pray for her?

No. That's not the way prayer works, at least not the "priestly" prayer of the church. It creates a symphony that's intended for everyone, includes everyone, and benefits everyone, the loved, the unloved, the lucky, and the unlucky, all equally. When a symphony is being played it's not selective or discriminatory, the music is for everybody. Granted, in its explicit expression, our "priestly" prayer might sometimes be directed towards the needs of one particular person ("Let us pray for Martha who's ill and in the hospital"), but everyone, Martha included, is given the benefit of the symphony. Indeed, such an understanding of "priestly" prayer should challenge us precisely to continually stretch ourselves in terms of the universal intent of our public prayer when we gather as church. Our public prayers on a Sunday are not so much intended for some individual Martha who's ill and in pain, as for the whole world in all its ills and pains, Martha and her pains included.

This analogy of public prayer as a symphony sheds light on another issue as well, namely, on why our public, priestly prayer does not have to be meaningful to us personally to be valuable.

Imagine again that you're part of an orchestra that, night in and night out, plays the same musical score. You've played the same piece many times over and, most evenings, are bored with it. You'd love, for your own stimulation, to play something else which would give you more energy. But the symphony isn't yours, isn't intended for you, and depends on many things beyond your tastes and preferences. Your participation is in function of something else. You're playing this for somebody else. So you play the same piece, night in and night out, not for your own benefit, but for the audience. You contribute your efforts to the symphony for the benefit of others, even as you yourself would prefer to be playing something else.

That's how "priestly" prayer works, it makes a symphony of prayer for the benefit of everyone. That's the intent of all Sunday services and all liturgical prayers of the church.

What constitutes "priestly" prayer? It's the public prayer of our churches, the Eucharist, the Sacraments, Services of the Word, Sunday worship. It's also the Office of the Church (the Liturgy of the Hours, the Breviary). All of these, by essence and definition, are public prayers, intended first of all not for the private nourishment of those praying them, but as a symphony of prayer for the benefit of the whole world.

The next time you're at a church service and telling yourself that this isn't nurturing you, remember that the function of an orchestra is, first of all, not to entertain itself but to make music for others.

Sharing the Gospel

Jesus sent out 72 of his followers to spread the good news about God. They were not to bring anything with them - no food, no extra clothes or shoes, not even money to spend. They were to visit strangers and completely depend on God to give them what they needed. That took a lot of faith!
