The witness of the lives of prophetic figures from various cultures and traditions can be iconic for us, and studying their lives can be both illuminating and transformative. This course will look specifically at the lives of Mother Teresa, Dorothy Day and Peter Maurin, Mohandas Gandhi, Oscar Romero and the Jesuit martyrs of El Salvador, and Martin Luther King and Rosa Parks as examples of modern day prophets. Their writings, sermons, letters, speeches and the witness of their lives will be examined in order to understand the spirituality and theology that was the source of their prophetic witness.

Young Women's Prayer Group is the new way that young women and new mothers can come together to reflect on their faith, even in the midst of their busy lives. Our Lady of Lourdes Mission Awareness Trip 2010

As many of you know, this past July, a team of 28 OLL parishioners traveled to El Salvador to pray and work with the communities of Mogotes and Tacuba. It is in keeping with Catholic Social teaching that we help others and share our faith with Catholics everywhere.

With the help of the parishioners here at home, the El Salvador Team has been raising money through our CASA project to build homes for those belonging to our sister parishes. Through the support of Our Lady of Lourdes, our young people have been able to experience another culture and help people in need. Thank you OLL!

If you want to be a part of this year's mission trip to South America then come on down! Tuesday, January 19:

Team El Salvador meets at 7 PM in the Spiritual Life Center.

2nd Sunday in Ordinary Time

It's the miracle that always captures the attention! Sight restored. Lame limbs healed. Hearing brought back. The dead raised. Water changed into wine. When you think about it, the first four are often routine today. Granted, the miracle doesn't happen every time. But many have their sight restored through cataract surgery. Broken bones that would have led to incapacitation are mended. Cochlear implants help some who did not hear. And even some people who were in cardiac arrest have been brought back. These medical miracles happen so regularly that we don't even advert to them as "miracles" anymore. They are "procedures." It's when things don't work that we get disappointed-and maybe even pray for a miracle.

Of course, we still haven't been able to crack that water-into-wine thing. It is still a bona fide miracle. Relying on the miraculous misses the point that John is trying to make in today's Gospel. The "sign" is not about how much wine we can get out of Jesus, but rather that he was revealing his glory, leading his disciples to belief. The signs in John's Gospel are again and again about faith, about coming to believe in Jesus.

Praying for the miraculous can lead to an increase of faith. But we can't let the miracle-or lack thereof-get in the way of faith. Instead, we can let our faith uncover the miraculous that already takes place each day: the healing that goes on in hospitals; the amazing production of food that feeds so many; the growing ability of humankind to understand this created world; the wonder of a child who grows from just a few cells to an adult in the span of two decades. It's these miracles that can capture our attention and deepen our faith!

God-With-Us

Before the Christmas Season becomes a distant memory, there are some beautiful stories of the Incarnation "God-With-Us" from the Outreach Office.

If you came to the Outreach office any day in December, to drop off a gift, make a donation or just offer words of encouragement, you can attest to the fact that there was one small path through the office! We received gifts in abundance!

The official distribution of gifts from the Advent Tree was Monday, December 20th; however, we continued to distribute gifts to a steady stream of families through Wednesday afternoon. Finally, late on Wednesday I made my way to my desk-piled high with cards and donations. As I sorted through the cards I came upon two identical envelopes-both sealed. I opened one envelope and found a card inscribed with simple note: "In memory of my mother and father. Merry Christmas." Folded inside the card were five one hundred dollar bills. The second envelope contained the same message and gift. As I continued to sort through the mail, there was a knock at the door. A 'guest' of Outreach-a single mother of two-was standing in the lobby, crying. In October, monies from Outreach helped her defray the funeral costs for her husband's burial. He had died suddenly. On this Wednesday before Christmas, she lost her job. She wouldn't be able to pay the rent for January. She was so frightened. How, she asked, was she going to manage? She didn't qualify for unemployment. She left Outreach that afternoon with gifts for her children, food and an envelope! "God-With-Us"!~

The second envelope was safely locked away. I was confident that the person this second card 'belonged too' would come to Outreach.

On January 4th (the feast of Elizabeth Ann Seton), Outreach was particularly busy. A woman, whom we have known for several years, came by. She didn't want anything-she just wanted to talk. She was holding a plastic card-a memorial card from a funeral. Hers is a story of raw courage in the face of a life-long debilitating illness, unemployment, a child requiring chemotherapy treatments and now, home foreclosure. She carries all this with grace, dignity and a very deep faith. One of six children, she was particularly close to one sister, speaking with her on the phone several times a day. Christmas Day, our client received a phone call that her sister had died, alone in the room she rented in a boarding house. In order to avoid burying their sister in Potters Field, each sibling contributed $500.00 to pay for her funeral. This woman's share of the expense was taken from monies she had put aside to pay toward her own and her son's medical expenses. On this day, she did not ask for assistance from Outreach. She came to the office to tell us of her sister's death because we had spoken to her sister on the phone many times offering support and counsel. By now, I am sure you know who the second Christmas card belonged to-"God-With-Us."

Thank you to the child who donated a shopping bag filled with children's purses-each containing a handwritten note and some coins. Thank you to Chris Heine and "Flight Docs" for the generous contribution of McDonalds Gift Cards which were used as 'stocking stuffers' for children. Thank you to all who gave of their time to help with the enormous task of sorting and bagging the gifts. Thank you to the many anonymous donors who so generously gave to Outreach during this season-rest assured that your gifts will be given to those in need.

Thanks to S. Nancy's Middle and High School students who attend Hang-Out Night-your donations was 'over the top'!

A heartfelt thank you to the faculty and students at OLL School. They adopted an Outreach Family with nine children. Each grade 'adopted' a child, selecting presents for their child. Thank you for making some children very happy!

Finally, in answer to several questions concerning the distribution of the gift cards donated to Outreach. These cards are used when we are asked for assistance with the purchase of diapers, medications or when a child is having a birthday and the family is unable to purchase a gift. Cards are also distributed to families when food stamp allotments run out-usually toward the end of the month. This enables families to purchase meat, dairy or other necessities which we may not have in our pantry.

I sincerely hope these stories of "God With Us" allow all to linger a bit longer in the fading glow of the Christmas Season. Outreach could not exist without the love and support of this Parish. Thank you all and Blessings in the New Year!

Carrying Our Solitude at a High Level

by Ron Rolheiser, OMI

In an autobiographical novel, My First Loves, Czech writer, Ivan Klima, shares how as a young man he struggled with a particular ambivalence. At one level, he wanted to be as free as his friends to act out sexually, but another part of him made him reticent to do that. This left him with the question: Was his hesitancy rooted in an unhealthy timidity or in a noble desire, a desire to carry his solitude at a high level. In the end, he decided it was the latter.

To carry one's solitude at a high level is not easy to do, especially inside a culture where most everything invites us take a path of less resistance. Our society, like the one within which Klima was raised, mostly invites us in the opposite direction, to take the road more travelled. Even among people with faith, the idea is prevalent that it is not worth the cost, if the cost is high, to hold out, to retain a high ideal. Rather our culture suggests: Sooner lower your standards than live in pain. Sooner let your soul endure an indignity than end up being alone. Sooner sell yourself short than be lonely.

I recently received a letter from a woman who expressed frustration in finding support, even among her church friends, for living out a high ideal. Here is how she expresses this: "It's been seven years now that I have lived widowhood, bringing me to lots of desolation and loneliness. I recall comments that were made to me shortly after my husband died, by good Christian friends: 'You'll marry again.' 'Why get married, just live with someone.' 'Why live with someone, just have the occasional Saturday night sleep over.' This attitude is very prevalent in my age group. And yet I never hear spiritual writers comment on this. You have a large audience. Could you?"

Her letter goes on to help spell out what that ideal is: "There is something amazing and wonderful that widows, male and female, can bring to the world that is not happening at the moment. Everyone is promoting performance and good looks, from medical intervention for sexual dysfunction, to glamorous lifestyles traveling, to being in beautiful homes (always young, good-looking, always in pairs), to anti-aging interventions of all kinds from face-lifts, cellulite reduction, etc. We need another voice! Where do we hear of the joys of surrendering to a life larger than ours, to entering the barren landscape of breaking bodies and minds, where the spirit can finally fly free, unencumbered, through cracks and wrinkles?"

Perhaps it's not as much that we have lost the ideal as that we have personally despaired that it can be there for us. In the end, we all still want to guard the dignity of our souls and we all still seek someone to meet and honor us there, with full respect for who we are. But, as one journalist reviewing a book on chastity recently put it, that ideal makes more sense when you're young and still have dreams of what you're waiting for than it does when you're in midlife and have long given up hope that what's best will ever happen for you. She speaks for our culture which believes, as the popular song puts it, that even a bad love is better than (what seems to be) no love at all. But, as Doris Lessing once put it: There is only one real sin and that is calling second-best by anything other than what it really is, second-best!

A lot of people struggle with this. Here's how another woman, also a widow, writes: "And with deepest respect and honor we may have to call upon our courage to walk away from anything and everything that does not resonate with our soul's truth as we struggle to know ourselves in the deepest ways. And if in the end we stand alone with the presence of God perhaps that is the way it was always meant to be. In other words, I'm setting my limits and it's mighty lonely!"

That's a pretty accurate description of Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane. The gospels, in describing his passion, never dwell on the physical pain (the scourging and the nails) but focus instead on his moral loneliness, his radical aloneness, on what it felt like being "unanimity-minus-one". And this, his refusal to compromise, was his great gift to us. He paid the price, in blood and loneliness, of entering that barren landscape of broken bodies and minds so as to carry solitude at a high level. Despite every kind of pain, humiliation, and loneliness he refused to compromise his ideals. And it left him mighty lonely.

Inside of everything that's best in us, we hear an invitation to join him there: To live in pain rather than lower our standards, to risk being alone rather than compromise who we really are, and to be lonely, mighty lonely even, rather than to sell ourselves short.

Mary had great faith in God. She also knew that God could do anything. So when the wedding servers ran out of wine, she knew Jesus could help. She said, "Do whatever Jesus tells you to do." That's the smartest thing any of us can do.
